Why Ant Media

The purpose of my life is to contribute to the lives of others – by making them believe that they can. At Ant Media and Spaceport, I am proving that a small ant can start something great. Together with the right people, we are building something that will have a profound impact – and inspire people all around the world to take their first step toward what they dream of building.

Because the world changes when ordinary people dare to build extraordinary things.

In short, my mission is to empower people to build what they dream.

One of the defining moments in my journey was selling a real-time streaming solution to Sony in Tokyo, Japan – while we were a small team operating out of Ankara, Türkiye in our first years.

We succeeded in closing a deal with one of the most pioneering technology companies in the world. Not from Silicon Valley. Not from a global tech hub. From Ankara.

That moment proved something important to me: where you start does not define what you can build.

Bio

- Spent 7 years as a software engineer in the defense industry, where I architected a new software stack that more than doubled the throughput of IP Crypto Devices.
- Authored the first Turkish book on Android Application Programming (2012) and followed it with a book on HTML5/CSS3 (2014) – establishing early thought leadership in mobile and web development.
- Founded and led Android Developer Days (2012–2014), growing it into one of Turkey's premier tech conferences with 2,000+ attendees, 70 speakers, and 35 sponsors including Google, Sony, and HTC.
- Recognized as a speaker at dozens of national and international technology events.
